Description :

Prsentation de l'diteurBeing a top predator is of little use when you are your own worst nightmare. Michael Birn has known this for a thousand years, and he has been running from the ghosts of his past ever since.After answering Lieutenant Harringtons call for help, Michael finds himself in Houston staring at a peculiar crime scene. An expert in preternatural wildlife, Michael immediately identifies the killer as a werewolf. The motivation behind the murder remains unclear, but one thing is certain, Michael has no desire to stick his nose in wolf business. After all, the werewolves have hunted down his kin to the brink of extinction, and as the sole survivor of his kind, he strives to keep a low profile. Michael's resolve vanishes when he finds Harrington and his wife savagely murdered in their home. As he sets to unearth the true motivations behind his friends slaying, the body count rises, and Michael soon becomes a suspect in the eyes of the law. But the police are the least of his concerns; the werewolves have uncovered his true nature, and they are coming for him.

Biographie de l'auteur Marc Daniel is the author of Shadow Pack, an urban fantasy novel and first book of the Michael Birn series. After spending significant amount of time in Ohio, France, and Montana, Marc is currently living in Texas where he writes as a full time hobby. Marc developed a taste for mystery novels very young, and was definitely hooked to the genre by age 11 after reading Agatha Christie's And Then There Were None. The Queen of Crime's unparalleled talent for mystery has had a strong influence on Marc's desire to write and this is reflected in his novels. His taste for science fiction literature came a couple years later after stumbling upon The Dreaming Jewels by Theodore Sturgeon. Simak, Asimov, Van Vogt, Zimmer Bradley, Wells, Bradbury followed in short order. Marc was 18 when he read Frank Herbert's Dune, his first space opera, and was immediately fascinated by the genre. He spent the next few years reading Space opera sagas almost exclusively (Herbert, Anderson, Bordage, etc) with the exception of the occasional Agatha Christie. He discovered fantasy much later at age 25 with Tolkien's Lord of the Rings trilogy. In the years following, his reading started gravitating more and more towards this literary style. Surprisingly enough, it took Marc another eight years to read his first urban fantasy, Patricia Briggs' Moon Called, and to realize he wanted more. Jim Butcher's Dresden Files series partially tamed his appetite but his thirst could only be quenched by writing his own series. A year later, Shadow Pack was born. Marc is currently working on book #2 of the Michael Birn series.
